COMMISSIONER BOUILLON HAS NOT MADE GOOD AS COMMISSIONER

In unconditionally and unceremoniously firing Commissioner Bouillon, the city council has taken the only action which in justice to the city and in the preservation of the city's dignity lay within

Since he has come to Edmonton Mr. Bouillon has been little short of a constant aggravation. Many of his actions within the past year have been those of a hopeless egotist, surcharged with a desire for the theatrical which, no matter what his accomplishments or abilities, made him impossible as an administrator for a city such as

When the council a year ago went out to employ a commis sioner, salary was no object and the only stipulation was that the man employed should show ability to handle an institution such as the city of Edmonton, with its enormous utility interests. Mr. Bouillon was the man employed for the job and he came to the city under the most favorable circumstances.

It is not claimed that things were in good shape then, and it is not admitted that they are in good shape now. But whatever the conditions at the time Mr. Bouillon came into office, there is one asset which he had at his command in a willing and loyal list of civil employees. There is no gainsaying that this city had been served by the men in its employ to the best of their abilities. If Mr. Bouillon did not consider these abilities up to the standard he had a right to expect, it was up to him to tone the service up to concert pitch by a little pressure here, some judicious coaching there, a rearrangement when necessary and the application of that superior ability which his salary would indicate the city had a right to expect from their ten thousand dollar man.

Mr. Boullon was not in office thirty days until it became aparent that he had one characteristic which it was not necessary to pay ten thousand dollars for—he was a "but-inski." There were signs of unnecessary interference, very frequently about the most

Friction commenced to make itself manifest in the administration of the city's affairs. Things did not run smoothly. There was a lack of co-operation between the city hall and the various branches of the city's activities, and it became manifest to the most casual observer that there was something radically wrong.

The experience of those working with Mr. Bouillon showed before long that he had an intolerance for the ideas, opinions and feelings of others which was entirely out of place in a salaried employee of the city, and feeling the little brief authority which is always dangerous, he got to the place where he was willing to usurp the functions of any official of the city or of the council itself. burying himself in a mass of detail or spending hours of time for which the city was paying good money in absolutely useless recriminations with men against whom he could not sensibly have any quarrel whatever. In fact Mr. Bouillon's idea of municipal administration appeared to be a one-man government in which he was the man and no other person had an idea which was worthy of a

To the friction which developed in the city's administrative department might easily be attributed the loss to the ciy's service of many valuable men. Chief Davidson, admittedly the best fire chief in the west, found that he could be more comfortable out of the city's employ and Chief of Police Lancey, whose department has a record from Atlantic to Pacific for efficiency, came to the conclusion that the provincial license department offered him more attrac tions than the department which he had built up with such infinite

But the culmination came when the commissioner discharged, without offering rhyme or reason, two superintendents against whose integrity no open charge has ever been made, and of whose ability it has never been shown that there was any lack.

It was in the subsequent development that Mr. Bouillon demor strated a penchant for the theatrical which was so out of place in high-salaried employee and in pursuit of which he has placed himself in the most grotesque positions, insulting and defying the men who were elected to represent the city and who were his virtual employers.

At times Mr. Bouillon's actions, attitudes and postures have been painful, to say the least, but his latest stunt of refusing to give any reason why he had discharged the superintendents and demand-ing a supreme court investigation into his case is the most painfu

At this stage affairs reached an impasse. The council had only one of two choices. Either admit that Mr. Bouillon was virtual czar of the city of Edmonton and that the council had really no excuse for existence, or take the course of throwing Mr. Bouillon out who has resigned.

By the discharge of Mr. Bouillon, however, it cannot be main tained that the commission form of government has been in any way attacked or that the council has undertaken in the slightest degree to over-ride the provisions of the charter.

The commission form of government, like every other form of government, requires at least a trace of common sense in the men government, requires at least a trace of common sense in the Lice who are invested with the responsibilities of administration. Mr. Bouillon has not shown good, ordinary, common sense, as his open letter to Alderman Mould, for instance, amply shows. On the other hand he has demonstrated himself narrow gauge and lacking in the qualities, qualifications and characteristics which are requisite in a anager of large affairs. He has asked more courtesy and more consideration and has given less than any man who has held the office since the city has been incorporated and has gone to lengths in his self-glorification which discounted to a very large degree the ability which he undoubtedly possesses in many lines of

In discharging Commissioner Bouillon the city council has taken the only course which was open to it. Commissioner Bouillon has not made good.

With the idea that it is now too late to invest judiciously in Edmonton real estate,—that it has reached its highest figure. That was what we heard in the past—it was not time their and it is not true today.

Jasper Avenue business lots at from $800 to $2,000 per foot frontage are still good investments. We have a number of first class fistings on this thoroughfare and if you are looking for a business property we can find you something that will give you a big return.

Pirst street and Namayo Avenue are still good buys and our list of properties on these streets is the most extensive in the city.

The Great Estate and Inglewood are growing in popularity. These properties in addition to being excellent investments, are ideal as homesites for those whose business interests compet them to keep in close touch with the city. At the same time they possess the advantages of a country residence, while the excellent street car service will bring you into the heart of the city in ten minutes. Have you seen our listings? We should like to show them to you.
